

Who is teaching young people about sex & relationships in the digital era?

For many young people today, sexual exploration and experimentation begins in the online space. The net is fantastic for many things but when it comes to information about sexuality the net is dominated by hard-core pornography and that's not a good role model for relationships.

Let's chat about it! is an interactive presentation and discussion about the sexual messaging young people might experience in digital spaces.

DETAILS:

- > Tuesday 21 June 2016
- > 7.30pm - 9.00pm
- > Camberwell Girls Grammar School
Barbara Sutton Hall
2 Torrington Street Canterbury
- > RSVP TO:
Victoria Hargreaves
hargreavesv@cgs.vic.edu.au

You are invited to a presentation that will:

EDUCATE adults about current sex and relationship messaging in digital spaces. In particular we discuss the influence of pornography.

EMPOWER adults with knowledge, understanding and skills that will assist them to confidently discuss issues around sex, relationships and identity with young people.

ENGAGE adults in ideas, practical suggestions and exercises to encourage non-judgmental discussions with young people around messaging presented in digital spaces.

Linette Etheredge is an educator, documentary filmmaker, mother and PhD candidate at Monash University. Her research explores the way young people interpret the intimate relationship models they see in digital spaces.